

Volunteers Needed for Supplement Study Targeting Healthy Glucose Metabolism

Econugenics, Inc. an innovative, locally owned and operated supplement company with a strong research base, is seeking volunteers to join our Pilot Study using the nutritional supplement, Metabolic Defense, for a two month period to determine its effectiveness in lowering the markers of Metabolic Syndrome. We are seeking people who know or suspect they may have abnormal blood sugar metabolism, insulin resistance, pre-diabetes or Type II diabetes, who are presently not taking any medication for their condition.

Bauman College and Bauman Nutrition are participating in the Metabolic Defense study and will be happy to refer anyone interested in participating to the Study coordinator.

Criteria for Volunteer Participation:

In order to qualify for the study you cannot be taking oral (or injected) anti diabetic medication in the past 3 month. A panel of lab tests will be ordered to see if you fit the study criteria. These lab tests should be covered by your health insurance. If you qualify, you will be given (free of charge) a two month supply of Metabolic Defense. You will be asked to take Metabolic Defense prior to each meal, fill out brief weekly symptom questionnaires. You will have several short visits to Amitabha Medical Clinic in Sebastopol to review your information and provide you with the supplement.

About Metabolic Defense: Metabolic Defense has been formulated by bringing together nutrients and herbs from several traditions in a uniquely synergistic formula using Chinese, Ayurvedic (East Indian) and Western herbal traditions. It is a natural food supplement made from ingredients that are consumed throughout the world. The formula is based on encouraging studies of the individual ingredients which have been shown to promote healthy metabolic function, normalize blood sugar metabolism, and support the immune and digestive systems.
